Open to everyone, this workshop will focus on raising awareness around the issues that LGBTQ parents encounter when parenting: identity bias, beliefs and assumptions.

Romi met Spencer 18 years ago when they had just finished high school. On their second date they talked about raising a family when they were a bit older. Today they are proud parents to 1-year-old Dev. For same-sex couples, creating a family isn't always easy, but it is often very well planned. Curiously, not everything goes according to the plan and sexual health education comes nowhere near describing their exciting journey into parenthood. Prior to being a full-time parent, Romi was a community developer and Co-Executive Director of a non-profit organization, teaching inclusive facilitation and group development. Today he is using those skills to raise his kidlet.

Snacks served & childcare available. Registration required.
